

Visiting scholars

A lecture series organized by the Léa-Roback Research Centre on social Inequalities in Health of Montreal

As scholars from outside Montreal visit Lea-Roback Research Centre its research associates take this opportunity to organize public forums where ideas are exchanged and information shared on current research .These lectures will be held as visitors come and go and therefore cannot always be scheduled long in advance. Up until our Website is in operation, we will keep you informed by email of coming lectures within this series.

Coming soon at the Lea-Roback Research Centre

Kim Raine

Director, Centre for Health Promotion Studies (University of Calgary)

Date : 19 August 2004

Time : 11:00 am - noon

Location : Montreal Public Health Department - Amphitheatre
1301 Sherbrooke St. East

Title : An Ecological Perspective on the Promotion of Healthy Weights

Dr. Raine studies health promotion from a socio-environmental perspective. Her research interests focus on the use of qualitative and participatory approaches to understanding the social and cultural determinants of inequities, or social justice issues, in health. She has a particular interest in studying gender, socio-economic status and the structure of the health care system as collective health determinants. The knowledge of health determinants generated through this research is used to inform health promotion strategies based in social change.

EVERYONE Welcome!

For information : 514-528-2400, ext. 3570

We appreciate early registration. To do so, please send your name and institutional affiliation to itherien@santepub-mtl.qc.ca . Thank you!